

Father's Corner July 15, 2018

In this weekend's Gospel, Jesus instructs the twelve to go out proclaiming the Gospel two by two. But then he goes a step further and tells them to bring nothing with them, not even a second tunic. How many of us today would trust the Lord as the Disciples did? Would we truly be willing to go out and first, evangelize in the name of Jesus, and then second, to do so with no money, no financial security, no promise of food, or shelter, or protection?

Jesus this weekend is calling us to have faith. Not the faith that is blind, but a faith that is filled with trust that the Lord will hold his promise that He will never abandon us, or lead us astray. When we have uncertainty in our futures, do we truly rely on God? Or do we try to prepare for every potential outcome? I must admit, that my normal mode of operating is to prepare for the worst, and hope for the best, but even the best laid plans fall short at times!

As we go into this week, may we truly seek to let go a little more every day, and seek to let God take control. It is a difficult thing to ask, a difficult thing to seek, but the rewards will be immeasurable! So if you have a tough decision you are facing, Let Go and Let God! If you are worried that He will lead you astray, or will leave you abandoned, look to His Word for encouragement!
