

Father's Corner

This weekend we hear in a very clear way that God, following from last weekend's readings, will never abandon us. Even if our shepherds are led astray, even if it seems like we have been abandoned by those who God has chosen to lead us, God promises that He will never abandon us. How great is our God? That He even takes into account our flaws as humans, and sets forth a plan to counteract any inevitability that may arise. God's love, grace, mercy, and wisdom are so great that many times we cannot begin to fathom what exactly He is doing in our lives until we are days, months, or years removed from the event.

This weekend, God reminds us that humanity is flawed, but that He is perfect! As we remember from a few weeks ago, this is important for us to remember because it is in our weaknesses, and our recognition of our weaknesses that we are made strong through the power of God! May we turn to Him when we are weak. May we turn toward Him when we feel alone and afraid. May we turn toward Him when we struggle and feel abandoned. He will, as He has always promised, be there for us, take care of us, and love us.
